

The possibility we may fail in the struggle ought not to deter us from the support of a cause we believe to be just. - Abraham Lincoln

Describe a person you know, have known or read about who championed a cause that was not popular with everybody.

How did that person's determination make you feel?

What is a cause you could help with irrespective of the likelihood of its success?
