

You discipline those under your supervision to correct, to help, to improve – not to punish.

Describe a person you know or have known who disciplined you but did it in a manner that made you feel were being corrected, helped improved not punished?

How specifically did this person communicate this?

How would you advise a parent to use this advice when disciplining their children? What specifically could they do when communicating with the child to let them know they are being corrected not punished?
