

The happiest moments in life come from making someone else happy.

Describe a person you know or have known that lived or lives their life with this approach.

How does this approach affect the quality of that person's self satisfaction (happiness)?

What are some areas of your day to day life where you could improve on being consistent in this approach? Which relationships in your life could you improve on this approach?
