

More often than we e'er suspect, the lives of others we affect.

What does this statement mean to you?

What elements of your personal behavior have the best influence on others? What elements of your personal behavior have the worse influence on others?

Who would you share this idea with and how would you advise that person to apply it?
