

The Refresh Button

How would describe the difference between reacting and responding to a situation?

What does the idea of having a mental “refresh” button mean to you? How would that fit in with responding no reacting to difficult situations?

What would the impact be? How could share that with others and help them?
