

“If you judge a book by its cover, you never get to open the book.”

What does the phrase: “If you judge a book by its cover, you never get to open the book.” mean to you?

What does the phrase: “Believe what you research, not just what you read.” mean to you?

Please give some specific examples of real-life situations where you or others could apply these ideas. How does asking someone else the question: “How do you know that?” when they make a blanket statement fit in here?
