

A Better Result Requires A Different Approach

What does the idea of: "A Better Result Requires A Different Approach" mean to you?

Should you only try a different approach when you have a bad result? Why or why not?

Google the "S curve" and refine and discuss your answer to the second question.
