

The Unintentional Non-Collaborator

What does the idea “The Unintentional Non-Collaborator” mean to you?

Do you ever get so enthusiastic about an idea that you forget to ask anybody else what they think?

When somebody asks you a question (brings a problem) do you always just provide an answer, or do you ask them: “What do you think?” Do you sometimes think that by the time you explain it you could have fixed it twice. What is the long-term impact of that thinking?
