

The worst thing you can do for those you love is to do the things they could and should do for themselves.

Describe a person you know or have known who has insisted you do for yourself the things you should even though it would have been easier for them and you if they did it.

What have been the long term results?

Is there somebody you are doing too much for that they could and should do themselves? How can you fix that?
