

Revenge is the weak pleasure of a little and narrow mind..

Describe a person you know or have known who you would characterize as never demonstrating a desire to get even with anybody who wronged him or her.

How does this person's forgiving nature impact their daily activities and approach to life?

Is this an area you could improve on? How do you reconcile this approach with those that say revenge is sweet?
