

Look in the mirror first

Describe somebody you were coached by or worked with who first looked at and acknowledged their shortcomings to the group when things didn't work out. What was the impact?

How does the expression: No bad students only bad teachers or you haven't taught until they learned fit in with look in the mirror first idea.

---

---

---

What would the most important tool be in getting a group to buy into this idea?
